

Dances Quadrille
on 70th Anniversary

A very unusual wedding anniversary was celebrated in New Lenox township last Saturday when Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Lynk celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary at their home on Maple road.

Usually when this notable anniversary rolls around each year, it has been the pleasant custom of this distinguished couple of many anniversaries to hold open house for all friends and relatives who wish to pay their respects to the pioneer celebrants. But Mr. Lynk's health has been failing for the last few months and it was decided best not to subject him to the excitement, according to Mrs. A.R. Kercheval, their youngest daughter, who with her husband lives with the aged couple and cares for them. Mr. Lynk was 92 years old last October.

On the other hand, Mrs. Isabella Doig Lynk, his wife, who is but two days younger than her husband, is as active and spry as a girl. Her hearing is perfect, her eyesight is excellent and her alert mind allows her to take an interest in all that goes on. She cares for her husband devotedly.

Immediate relatives consisting of children, grandchildren, nieces and nephews, about 30 in all were entertained in their home on Maple road Saturday evening, Feb. 6.

Of the 60 guests present at the wedding at 7 o'clock on Feb. 6, 1856, but one person survives, he being Mr. Alexander Doig of Joliet now 84 years old and a brother of Mrs. Lynk. Following their wedding the youthful couple went to their new home on Maple road, where they have lived ever since with great content and increasing prosperity.

Of the six children born to the pair the following three survive: Mrs. Nettie Bliss of Shreveport, La., Mrs. Eva Kercheval and Edwin A. Lynk of Chicago. There are now 11 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren.

Stanton Lynk was born in romantic Kinderhook, perhaps chronicled by Diedrich Knickerbocker, Columbus Co., N.Y. Oct. 7, 1834, and is the only survivor among 9 brothers and sisters.

He was 18 years old, full of hope and energy when he came west with his parents, settling on the farm which he now occupies and worked for many years.

Another notable circumstance was that the Lynk family came west all the way by water. Living near the Erie canal, what was more convenient than to load goods, chattels and youngsters on a picturesque canal boat. What fun for the restless children, 9 of them, to trot bravely on the tow path away ahead of the poky but safe, boat.

From the Erie canal, they passed thru Lake Erie, Lake Huron and Lake Michigan to Chicago thence on a packet boat to Joliet to the New Lenox farm.

The very first year was disastrous. A heavy hail storm in mid summer laid all crops low. The rest of the year Mr. Lynk spent in helping to grade the Rock Island road between Joliet and Mokena by way of occupation.

As was a year after his arrival that he was married and brought his bride to the present old home.

An even temper, regular habits and cheerful disposition have contributed to his usefulness of years.

Mr. Lynk served as highway commissioner for several years, when it was at his suggestion that iron bridges were built across Hickory creek, saving the expense of frequent loss by spring freshets. He was also instrumental in building the first two miles of gravel road on old Maple street.

For the past 20 years following an accident by which his hip was injured, he has been obliged to use crutches.

Mrs. Lynk came also from a numerous family. Born in Philadelphia with 11 brothers and sisters, her family moved to Washington, D. C., her father was a stone and marble cutter and worked on many of the historic buildings of the cap-

LINCOLN

by Wiley Simmons,
Oak Lawn, Illinois.

Let us sing a song for Lincoln,
Tried and true American,
He who in the time of conflict
Made our country safe for man.

Born 'way down in old Kentucky
In a humble cabin home,
Where he labored hard to live and Later started out to roam.

Soon he came to Illinois
Where he struggled hard for life,
Always honest, full of courage,
Smiling at all pain and strife.

Truly all his life was hardships,
Fiercely straining every nerve,
Till rebellion caused our nation
To depend on him to serve.

'Mid the battle cry of freedom
And weird screams of death and pain
He so bravely led to victory;
Made our nation whole again.

At the close of bloody struggle,
And amid rejoicing cheers,
An assassin's bullet killed him
Turning all the world to tears.

Now we sing his praise above him,
Our good martyred hero, true,
Just to show how much we love him

And the Red and White and Blue.
Raise his dear old flag of Freedom,
May we let it, to, be ours,

And when February greets us,
Kindly strew his tomb with flowers.

THE WIFE-SHIP WOMAN

THE GIRL

SYNOPSIS.—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Biloxi, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "White Indian," sees a Natchez Indian post a declaration of war against the French. For his own purposes, he hastens to Biloxi to carry the news to Bienville, French governor.

"Ah, but Sieur de Bienville? I, your friend, wish by all the saints that you knew him! After you went up the river the last time 40 of his excellency's soldiers deserted, running away to Carolina. And he vowed he would hang you if he ever caught you, for enticing them away."

This was disturbing news. I could trust Joe Labrador, old companion in many a venture, to speak naught but the truth. Then I became angry, as a man will who is wrongfully accused. There was much Bienville could have arranged me for; I might even have seduced his soldiers from their allegiance had it appealed to me as being feasible. So I became incensed now I was charged with something I was innocent of—doubly resentful because I had not had the wit to think of it.

Labrador mistook my silence for hesitation, and earnestly said:

"You must turn back at once before any of Monsieur du Pratz's people see and recognize you. I will go with you as far as Fort Rosalie, perhaps farther. I will forget my new wife. I will go beyond Chartres. Bah! there will be women enough for all of us. Sieur de Bienville is in a temper. Now France and Spain have had a peace-smoke he is like a bear with a sore head. For years he has begged to have the seat of government changed to la Nouvelle Orleans. He has been denied. Pardieu. What will the imbeciles in France have? Bienville is to make the Lillies grow in the valley. Yes. He is to send the immigrants on their way as far as the Missouri and the Yazoo. To be sure. But behold! Nothing but jailbirds, worn-out rakes and women of the street have been sent over. And even these so fast he cannot have time to send them to the plantations. Thank the good God some decent women will be coming along now! Bienville is a bad man to have against one."

During Labrador's outburst I had had time to cool off. I remembered the card I had to play, and could not believe the governor would deal harshly with me. I was innocent of deceiving his soldiers away. They had not needed my urging to make them deserters. And small wonder that any were left for garrison duty, now it had become necessary for the governor to quarter them among the Indians, where they dressed—rather, undressed—and painted themselves like savages, and learned ways of idleness, which unfitted them for routine work.

"Where is the governor?" I asked. "At New Biloxi. If he has not been warned of your coming you have every chance to get away. It is your lucky star that sent you by this cut-off instead of down to la Nouvelle Orleans; for he has spoken ill of you there, and every cabin is ready to gobble you up." "He is unjust. He wrongs me. I'll see him. No man on earth can send me running to cover when I am innocent," I declared, feeling very virtuous because I was innocent of the crime charged.

He eyed me admiringly, yet pityingly. "You know you are English," he softly reminded me.

"Runaway English," I gruffly corrected. "There are runaway English, just as there are runaway Frenchmen. I've lived on the river for three years. It suits me. I'll stay."

"Ma foi! Yes, you'll stay!" he growled.

"And you? You go back to Orleans?" He hesitated, his soul struggling between friendship, fear and hopes of matrimony. One of the last two won for a time; and he muttered:

"I return to Bayou St. Jean. When the ship comes in some of the women are to be sent at once to la Nouvelle Orleans. I shall be there, waiting. I shall marry a good girl. If she turns out bad I can always go deep into the forest."

I could not blame him for avoiding my dangerous company when his presence could aid me none. He was one of the Labradors of Canada, and like the majority of the Canadian born or bred had small liking for the French born, just as the latter looked with contempt on the children of the new world.

He showed his native astuteness in avoiding the governor's displeasure by keeping clear of me for the time. I knew that when it came to a pinch he would cheerfully make any sacrifice to aid me; for there was a small matter between us, born of the dangers of the Illinois country, an affair of my aiding him to escape the stake. And he believed he was indebted to me.

He reasoned that just now he could help me none by accompanying me to Biloxi. More than likely such an association with the White Indian—as I was called because of my forest-running—would place him under suspicion. And lastly, were not new wives coming to la Nouvelle Orleans, and those on the spot would have first choice.

"My friend," he softly called as his light canoe moved off a few rods toward the St. Jean shore, "if you find the path rough I shall know it. The river is all ears and a great gossip. My ear is to the ground. I shall hear. If the worst comes the river path to the north shall be opened, and we will follow it and find plenty of room to live our lives in the good God's country up there. You are runaway English. I will kiss my wife goodbye and be runaway French. Bon jour et bon voyage."

Bienville had vision. He knew the importance of a river port. He had fretted much because the government had ignored his preference for New Orleans. It was the one spot on the river in close proximity to the gulf that would answer for a permanent settlement. I think he would have won his point if not for a rise in the river inundating the little settlement; and Biloxi was again chosen. Like a shuttlecock the seat of government had shifted back and forth between Biloxi and Mobile.

If any one could seal the Mississippi valley for France it would be Bienville with his bulldog determination and his commonsense. Even though working under the tremendous burden of trash for colonists and the company's frantic orders for the discovery of mines, or anything else which could be immediately realized upon as an asset, he believed he could win out if permitted to develop New Orleans and other river ports. To control the destiny of the valley from the gulf was impractical. One might as well try to govern it from Pensacola as from Mobile or Biloxi. And I was determined to complete my journey and meet this cool-headed, sagacious executive with but one card to play against his belief that I was something more than a renegade Englishman.

For the rest of the trip across the lake I saw no one except a Choctaw hunter after birds, and was opposite the mouth of the River of Pearls, when two Frenchmen in a clumsy sailing packet came along and went into the wind, and gaped at me in amazement. "The White Indian!" one of them exclaimed, while the sail flapped impatiently against the stub of a mast.

"I was beginning to think you had lost your tongues," I replied. "I am bound for Biloxi. Can you give me a tow?"

They exchanged quick glances, and the elder of the two bowed most graciously and insisted: "Better than that, monsieur. The pirogue will annoy you. Make it fast for a tow, then come aboard and take your pleasure decently."

The byplay of their eyes had not escaped me; nor did I doubt they had been ordered to watch for my coming. It mattered nothing, however, so long as I wished to make Biloxi. The boat would be more comfortable, and if they were secretly delighted to serve their master, I too, could rejoice at being relieved from the exertion of paddling the heavy pirogue the full distance.

So we set off, contented and gay, the two of them singing snatches of chansons which invariably reflected some amorous sentiment. Between these bits of sentiment they asked me polite questions about the upper river. It was plain that word had been passed along the river to watch for and report my presence. Joe Labrador had said the very huts at New Orleans were ready to "gobble" me up. The nearer I drew to Biloxi the more sharp set would I find this disposition to be. "What is the latest news, my friends?" I finally managed to ask as their chattering queries slowed down. "A wife-ship comes to Biloxi. We hurry home," said the younger man with a snicker.

"Silence, Basile," sternly rebuked the other. "Monsieur, the White Indian, we are Jules and Basile Mattor, father and son. What the boy says is true; a wife-ship comes. It is bad for man to live alone." And he fetched a deep sigh.

"The Company of the Indies has listened to his excellency's advice and will send no more wantons across the ocean," babbled the young man.

"Silence, child!" commanded the father. "Yes, monsieur, the White—" "Monsieur Mattor, I am William Brampton," I broke in.

"Monsieur Brampton, I am more glad to meet you than you can know. As the boy says, this wife-ship will be filled with honest women. Women one can love and cherish, and take pride to show to one's friends. Good-cooks, good—"

"But what of the news?" I interrupted. Mattor pored drew a long face and mournfully replied:

"The last trade law goes bad with us. As for that all our trade laws are bad. To get supplies we must go to Mobile, Pensacola or Massacre Island (the old name for Dauphine Island, so called from the mounds of human bones found there). For delivery at la Nouvelle Orleans we must pay five per cent extra, twice that if delivered at Natchez, and 13 per cent—ah, mon Dieu! How that extra premium does climb up—at the Yazoo."

I suppressed a smile to hear how foolishly the Company of the Indies was playing into English hands. It would be hard enough for them to hold their trade without penalizing their customers. The directors of the company could never comprehend that to succeed it must encourage the colonists to work for themselves. "Work for us," was their motto. Mattor ran on:

"But that is not the worst, Monsieur Brampton. If we would trade we must send our products to la Nouvelle Orleans, Biloxi, Ship Island, or Mobile. And first-grade tobacco can bring only 25 livres the hundred, rice 20 livres the hundred, the best wheat flour 15 livres, and a livre for a deerskin—think of it!"

"It is hard to be a planter here," I agreed. "Now in Carolina—but I cannot return there."

"We understand monsieur's very sensible emotion. Monsieur cannot return there," said Jules.

His expression and bearing were simplicity itself; his words contained a veiled threat. "Bah! Who cares?" I cried. "Not I. I have lived in the woods so long I am known as the White Indian. I will never be cooped up in a settlement again, even if free to come and go as I pleased. All I wish now is to find Sieur de Bienville."

"Then you will go to Ship Island, for his excellency went there this morning to await the coming of the wife-ship," said Jules.

I rolled my robes in a pillow and stretched out in the bow and fell asleep almost at once. When I awoke it was to see the stars overhead. I slept again, and on my second awakening found we were behind Ship Island and making for the anchorage on the north side, where the masts of a ship were silhouetted against the morning sky. As I surveyed the Bay of Biloxi, the islands, and the main, I could not blame Bienville for his impatience with the government for insisting on a gulf port. Shoaling of the port on Dauphine had driven the seat of government from Mobile to Biloxi, but those who dwell in Biloxi learned that the reflection from the sand was evil to endure, and that boats left unused were soon destroyed by the worms.

However, it was the unloading of the cargo-ships that supplied the last word in waste and inefficiency. Vessels from France must stop at Ship Island, nearly 15 miles from the settlement. The cargoes were transferred to packet boats which were met by small boats when two or three miles from shore. Nor was this the end of landing the goods, for the small boats in turn took the sand a musket-shot from shore, and their loads were brought in by men, or by carts on high wheels. All this fuss and bother was enough to drive a practical mind to frenzy. When immigrants are substituted for barrels and bales one can easily imagine the confusion and dismay of the newcomers.

I had seen them huddled together without shelter, without food, homeless, starving and dying, while Bienville worked most desperately to distribute them up and down the river.

At that time I stood in high feather with the governor, having accompanied him and his axmen the previous winter to New Orleans. But I had never been on Ship Island when immigrants were arriving. As it was part of my business to learn the kind of men and women, as well as the number, the company was sending over, I was glad the governor was at the island, as otherwise I might not have been allowed to go there.

A priest at Kaskaskia had told me on the down-trip that the reckless shipping of convicts and fallen women had been ordered stopped, and that a more desirable class of home-makers were coming to the valley. The more desirable they were the more aroused the Atlantic provinces would become. "I have some hard Spanish money for you, Monsieur Mattor," I remarked as I sat upright.

"God hear me! But hard money is a fairy hard to catch, now that Monsieur L'as has covered the world with his paper money!" exclaimed the father.

The very packet seemed to sniff the prospect at silver and leaped more buoyantly through the shallow waters.

At Ship Island, where the boats anchored—the Mattors called it Isle Francoise—there was twenty feet of water. As we drew nearer we saw the ship was discharging merchandise, while men and women were roaming about in all directions, receiving their first impressions of the new world.

"Land me near the ship. I'll hunt the governor afoot," I said.

We ran into a cove near the ship and I tossed Jules some silver pieces, which he kissed enthusiastically and then hid in his clothes.

"It's the Maire," cried Basile, his eyes lighting with boyish interest. "I saw her last season when she came in to Dauphine with the warship Africaine. They were bringing blacks from the Guinea coast. Fough! A sweet-smelling ship for the ladies!"

"And they are ladies!" cried Jules. "I see one in black who walks like a queen. Wives for some of us. First come, first served!"

And with that he leaped ahead of me and raced up the beach in his haste to present Basile with a step-mother.

It was not until clear of the Maire, which the immigrants seemed to shun, that I sensed the confusion of the scene and observed the amazement and despair of the newcomers. A sergeant, tanned as dark as a Guinea black, was unusually active in pulling and pushing the immigrants about. In disgust I watched this fellow, his dirty paws making too free with the women, and then had my ire aroused by beholding him seize a woman in black by the arm—the one Mattor said walked like a queen—and give her a spin that sent her reeling across the sand to fall at my feet.

"Tonnerre de Dieu!" I found myself shouting as I sprang between the brute and the poor thing. "Are these people here for punishment, or to build a new world?"

"Ten million devils! Who are you to interfere with Sergeant Suarez, twenty years in the marines, when he is doing his duty?"

"Never mind who I am. Leave the woman alone."

He crouched for a spring, his eyes glaring like a tree-cat's, and I was ready for him, when to my surprise the rage died out of his face. His dark countenance began twisting up like old parchment. "God is good!" he whispered exultingly. "That brown beard! That big nose! Broll me and boll me if it isn't the White Indian! He! Ho!"

"The White Indian, yes. What of it, you nimblejack?"

"No, no," he softly cried. "I shall not be drawn into a quarrel with monsieur. He is game for my betters. Ah! But this rare news. I leave you to console the wench, monsieur, while I go to tell his excellency."

And off the rascal ran.

I turned to help the woman to her feet, but she was already erect, a slim figure in black, the somber tone of her attire being accented by the mass of yellow hair and the clear ivory pallor of her features. And as I gazed I found myself thinking that the hardships of the voyage had left her all eyes. Several women, attracted by the scene, laughed raucously; and a glance told me Bienville's insistence that decent women only be sent had not been heeded. I would have turned away if not for the unspoken appeal in the oval face of the sergeant's victim.

"I have not thanked you, monsieur," she whispered.

"Nor shall you. I did nothing. But you are ill, mademoiselle."

"A hunter bargaining for a wife!" shrilly screamed a wanton. "They swim out to meet us. Don't waste time on that sniveling thing, my big man."

The woman in black was shrinking from her mates, and well might she, as with foul abuse they upbraided her for trying to "steal the first proper man." There was death in her face as the torrent of filth was loosed, and I would have retreated to save her something of embarrassment had not the Mattors now come up to be instantly pounced upon by the harpies.

Well, the hero has met the heroine. Who and what is she?

Faithful to His Trust

While attending his sheep on the downs of Pycombe, near Brighton, George Pearce, an elderly shepherd, tripped over a rut and broke a bone in his leg, says the South Wales News in a recent issue.

His cries for help having passed unheeded, he determined to round up his sheep before seeking aid for himself.

With the aid of his dog he drove them into a pen and fixed several hurdles to prevent their escape.

Then, limping in great pain, he carried three bags of fodder, which he put in the troughs for the lambs.

Having made certain that his charges would not suffer, Pearce limped over rough ground to his cottage, nearly two miles away, and there collapsed at the door.

Vote for S. W. Starr

"THE FARMER'S CANDIDATE"
For Republican Nomination for STATE REPRESENTATIVE
41st Senatorial District

Vote for S. W. Starr "The Farmer's Candidate" backed by the farmers of two counties and the Farmer's Weekly Review, and let him help solve our Agricultural problems for he has made a study of farming situation and best measures of relief.

"One of the best answers to the charge of favoritism to farmers that I have seen," says Mr. Starr, "comes from the President of the International Harvester Company. It is worth quoting."

The farmers' burden has been greatly increased through class legislation in favor of labor and industry, which does not bring any compensation in the way of return to the farmers. In other words we have raised the cost of his operations and the cost of everything he has to buy through special privileges granted to industry and labor, (by the tariff and other means), all of which he has added to his burden and for which I see no compensation until we reach the time when substantially all he produces may be consumed at home, and that will not happen during the present generation.

This is a business man's point of view but it defines the farmers position correctly.

Farmers are seeking to have some part in determining the price they are to receive for their products and to find the same kind of a market to sell in that they are obliged to buy in. They are simply trying to put the industry of agriculture on a plan of equality in returns with other industries.

Where is the place to begin? In Will County. By electing S. W. Starr, "The Farmer's Candidate."

When Business is Good

SATURDAY night is a mighty good time to ask yourself this question: "Is our community sending more money out of town than is coming in each week?" Of course the only safe answer is "NO!"

This means that we folks in this neighborhood must patronize local supply men and merchants if we expect our town to prosper and "stay on the map."

Frankly, it means that every citizen will find it most profitable to read the advertisements in this paper every issue, and to follow their good advice.

Our advertisers are all personally interested in this town—and in YOU. They are helping you build a better home community. When business is good, their profits are being shared with you in an endless chain of co-operative betterment.

Read the Ads in this Paper

Housework Worth $900 a Year, but—

Nine hundred dollars a year is the value of the average housewife's services in the home, and statistics show there are 20,700,000 women engaged in housework, according to Mrs. Leonora Z. Meder, prominent Chicago woman lawyer and economist.

"The wife," said Mrs. Meder, who was formerly commissioner of public welfare of Chicago, "is an executive, purchasing agent, budget expert, and producer rolled into one. The successful home maker studies food values. She arranges her budget so that the food she buys will have all the necessary body building qualities.

"The woman who would keep down her food bill will do better to spend her money on milk and green vegetables than on butter, though butter is one of the best sources of the essential food element, vitamin A. There are butter substitutes, but nothing can take the place of milk and vegetables.

"Milk, food experts say, is the most nearly perfect food. Science solved the problem by inventing evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in cans and with sixty per cent of the water removed. Because evaporated milk is of double the richness of ordinary market milk, many housewives dilute it half and half with water for cooking purposes. Keeping longer than ordinary milk, there is no waste from souring. Then, too, it is cheaper.

"Savings also can be made on meat. Cheaper portions of beef skillfully cooked are highly nutritious and often better tasting than portions which cost more. The shoulder, breast and stew meat of lamb are excellent. Pork shoulders, feet, tails, heart, spareribs and hocks are in the same category."

Fudge Making Finds Favor With Co-Eds

Fudge may be classed with pie as a typical American dish. It has a place in every young man's heart and every girl's category of accomplishments. Co-eds swear by fudge and "fudge shines" in sorority parlors are the very latest wrinkle in collegiate circles.

There's a big wallop in a platter of fudge, the co-eds explain, because it's one of the greatest sources of energy, containing both milk, the "perfect food," and sugar.

If you've any doubt of the place fudge occupies in the young male heart, try these recipes on him and hear his own answer. Each of the appended dishes was prepared by Miss Meta Given, doing research work in the home economics department of the University of Chicago, and they are the result of much experimentation.

Chocolate Fudge.

2 cups sugar
1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup water
1 tsp. corn sirup

Shave the chocolate so that it will melt more easily. Add the sugar, salt, milk, water and corn sirup. Cook, stirring until chocolate and sugar are melted, and then only occasionally to prevent burning, until the soft ball stage is reached, or a temperature of 234 degrees Fahrenheit. Remove from fire and add the butter. Cool until almost lukewarm, 110 degrees, add flavoring and beat vigorously until when a little is dropped from the spoon it will hold its shape. Pour into oiled tins and mark in squares.

Cocoanut Candy.

1 1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1/2 cup water

Put butter into granite saucepan; when melted, add sugar, milk and water, and stir until sugar is dissolved. Heat to boiling, and cook to the soft ball stage. Remove from fire, add cocoanut and vanilla, cool to 110 degrees Fahrenheit and beat until creamy and mixture begins to sugar slightly around edge of pan. Pour into buttered pan and when cool mark in squares.

Peanoche.

2 cups brown or maple sugar
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1/2 cup water
1 tsp. butter
1 tsp. vanilla
2 cups chopped nuts

Boil sugar, milk and water to the soft ball stage. Remove from the fire; add butter, flavoring and nuts. Cool to 110 degrees Fahrenheit, then beat until creamy and thickened; pour into a greased tin and when firm cut.

MAKING FARM RECORDS TALK

By D. H. OTIS
Agricultural Director,
American Bankers Association.

Any one who has driven an automobile in a new country knows the value of a good road map. Farm accounts, properly kept, are a reliable road map to aid the farmer in directing the business management of his farm. In farming communities where records have been kept in considerable number it is not uncommon to find differences in net income of $1,000 per farm between the average and the poorer farms of the community. It is also frequently found that there is a difference of over $1,000 between the average farm and a few of the better farms of the community. These differences of from $1,000 to $2,000 per farm in the net income are of vital concern to any farm in any community.

D. H. Otis

Where to Get the Facts

Farm records and inventories will reveal the reasons for these differences. The various colleges of agriculture and the United States Department of Agriculture have a collection of records and farm management surveys from which they find it possible to construct standards or guides showing actual attainments under good systems of management. Figures of this kind are available to county agents and farmers who desire to use them. It is also possible to organize farm accounting groups in a community and with the help of the College of Agriculture to develop community standards showing what the average and what the better farms are doing. These standards or examples of what the more successful farms are doing, when handled in such a way as not to divulge the identity of the owners, are a wonderful help in pointing out to the less successful farmers the weak spots in the business management of their farms.

How to Use the Facts

The farmer who keeps a careful record of the factors relating to the business management of his farm is in position to compare his farm with the average and with the best in the volume of business, as number of acres, total investment, number of cows, total receipts and total expenses. He can check on his diversity of income by comparing his income from sale of cows, sale of livestock, livestock products and sales from miscellaneous sources. His quality of business can be studied by comparing such items as income per acre or income per cow, etc.

By such a process the farmer is in position to make his records talk to him and point out the weak and the strong features in his farm operation. There is no tax that we pay today that compares with the tax we pay for our ignorance. This is true on the farm as elsewhere. Farm records, including inventories from which it is easy to form financial statements, will do wonders in reducing the tax of ignorance and placing farm business on a business basis and inspire confidence in the farmer, himself and with all those with whom he deals.

BANKERS HELP

Minnesota bankers played a constructive part in boosting the attendance at the Northwest Dairy Exposition held in connection with the State Fair in September. Five hundred members of the Minnesota Bankers Association received letters from the chairman of the agricultural committee, asking them to assist in forming delegations from their respective communities to attend the show.

The Atlanta, Ga., Clearing House gives the boll weevil no rest. In an effort to effect a concerted and statewide poison war on the boll weevil, this institution sent letters recently to all the bankers in the state asking that they assist in emphasizing the need for a wholesale war on the pest. According to a recent survey poisoning is being done on the larger farms, but not to any appreciable extent on the small farms. According to reports by the Department of Agriculture, the boll weevil infestation is heavier this year than ever before, and if allowed to go unchallenged the crop will be destroyed. Immediate and extensive action is urged.

Over two hundred bankers in Iowa recently made an arrangement to attend the Iowa State University for a two-day period and study farming and farm problems. The bankers will sit as students under the professors in the agricultural department, and will dig right down to the bottom of the many subjects which are of mutual concern to themselves and the farmers. This action on the part of the bankers of Iowa shows a real spirit of interest and a determined intention to understand.

Clark County (S. D.) Bankers, have appointed an agricultural committee of five to aid the county agent in putting across the latter's program of work, with especial emphasis on a ten-acre corn contest and eradication of tuberculosis in the county.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HOW TO LEAVE AN ESTATE

"Do you know, Auntie," said Helen, as she accepted a cup of tea from Aunt Emmy, "I feel terribly sorry for Mrs. Strong."

"Yes," agreed Aunt Emmy, "it will be hard for her. She is such a dependent, helpless, little thing."

"Oh, I don't mean that," interrupted Helen. "Her feelings are so hurt because, as she says, her husband publicly insulted her by not making her executrix and trustee of his estate."

"Good gracious, child, did she say that?" exclaimed Aunt Emmy, setting her cup down with a bang.

"Yes, she did, Auntie," said Helen, enjoying the sensation she had made and determined to make the most of it, "and I'm sure I agree with her. The idea of that old man appointing a trust company to look after Mrs. Strong's money. It isn't as though there wasn't plenty of it. The Strong's are the richest people in town, I guess."

"Well, for mercy's sakes!" cried Aunt Emmy, disgust in every syllable, "if it don't beat all! You are as big a fool as she is then!"

"What do you mean, Aunt Emmy?" asked Helen with dignity. "I think it nothing short of disgraceful for a man to show that he has no confidence in his wife by putting his money in strangers' hands to be doled out to her as they see fit."

"You never thought that up, Helen," said Aunt Emmy, "that's Mrs. Strong. She always talks as though she was living in a story book, poor, silly, little thing."

Helen blushed and Aunt Emmy went on—"Do you know what it means to administer an estate, especially a big one like Mr. Strong's?"

"Why, no," stammered Helen, "but it must be simple."

Aunt Emmy sniffed. "Simple! Let me tell you a little about it. When a man dies the things he owns cease for a time to be anybody's property and become his estate. The property passes from his control on his death naturally, and as his estate it is controlled and supervised by the Court which will be in charge of the estate for many months probably. First this Court finds out whether or not there is a will and if the will is valid. Then it must find out about the executor. If the will is properly drawn and valid, it will be 'admitted to probate.' The persons who witnessed it must be found and examined.

"The executor must satisfy the Court as to fitness and willingness to perform the many arduous duties involved. Perhaps he will have to furnish a bond, to assure the Court of his financial responsibility. He must assemble all the so-called assets, have them valued and file an inventory and appraisal of them with the Court. All the debts against the estate must be collected. The settlement of all claims against persons and corporations is a job no one without a thorough knowledge of business can undertake.

"In an estate like Mr. Strong's there is sure to be a certain amount of financial negotiation that demands banking knowledge. Then the executor must pay claims against the estate in the order of precedence laid down by law. Also you know state inheritance and federal estate taxes must be met promptly. Finally, after the estate is settled as to claims it has and claims against it, the executor must see that the various bequests are made."

"Oh, Auntie, don't tell me any more. I never thought that there were so many complicated things to be done. Poor Mrs. Strong never knew a thing about business."

"Mr. Strong knew that," remarked Aunt Emmy dryly, "and don't you suppose he had his children in mind, too? He wanted his estate handled so that the children and Mrs. Strong would be protected and assured of a good, comfortable living all their lives, with something to go on to the grandchildren. Even if Mrs. Strong were a business woman, no one could tell how long she would live to administer the estate. He knew that the trust company would not die, nor lose its faculties, nor be influenced by personal feeling so that it might be unjust to some one, and that it represents some of the best business and banking judgment in town."

"Well, I guess old man Strong knew what he was doing!" said Helen.—Anne B. Aymes.

The more recently adopted method of killing the common barberry which spreads black stem rust of small grains is by the use of such chemicals as salt and kerosene, according to the Department of Agriculture. These methods have several advantages over the digging method formerly used. They are less laborious, cheaper and more certain. This is especially true if bushes are growing in stony ground where digging is difficult. Department Circular 356 tells all about how to use this method.—Banker-Farmer.

Nourishing Drink for Children

BABIES and children, the same as adults, grow weary of being fed the same food in the same way each day. It is true that most children take naturally to milk, but that does not mean that they must be fed it ad nauseam. On the contrary, that is the very thing to be avoided.

Pediatricians advise consumption by children of a quart of milk a day in one form or another. This does not mean skim milk, but whole milk, for the skimmed product is lacking both in butter fat and the essential food element known as vitamin A, which is found in butter fat. Many mothers do not appreciate that removal of cream from the top of a bottle of milk results in skin milk.

In evaporated milk, a product recommended by many leading doctors for the use of infants and children and which is simply pure cow's milk sterilized in cans and with sixty per cent of the water removed, there is no cream line. The milk in the top of a can is the same as it is in the bottom of the container. This results from a process called homogenization, in which the fat globules in the milk are broken up into such microscopic bits that they remain in homogeneous suspension. Every drop of homogenized milk has a buttery taste because it contains butter fat. For this reason, in evaporated milk, there is none of the flat taste one finds in drinking from the bottom of a bottle of market milk.

In order to avoid feeding the baby or child plain milk three or four times a day, many authorities recommend the use of a mixture of fruit juice and milk, a highly palatable and refreshing drink.

Following is a recipe worked out by experts for an orange-milk drink: Mix in a fruit jar 1/2 of a cupful of orange juice, 1/4 of a cupful of evaporated milk, three teaspoonfuls of sugar, 1/2 teaspoonful of lemon juice and a few grains of salt. Shake well before serving.

MEN'S DRESS

By
W. A. Churchill, Secretary
BORN TAILORS GUILD

Taking Care of Your Clothes

NO MAN can ever be well dressed who does not take proper care of his clothes. Even the man who prefers to wear them hard and replace them often will find he cannot be well groomed without giving a certain amount of attention to the upkeep of his apparel.

The average man, however, buys his clothes with a view to getting good service and having them look well during their entire reign. For this reason he buys good materials, conservative styles. It is poor economy to put on an everyday suit and wear it constantly and the same applies to shoes, hat and gloves.

Plenty of changes is one secret of getting full returns from your clothing investments. It is poor economy to put on an everyday suit and wear it constantly and the same applies to shoes, hat and gloves. The suit that has been worn all day is as much entitled to a good night's rest as is its owner. It should be put on hangers, and, if possible, hung out in the open and not shut up in some airless closet. Shoe trees take only a second or two to slip in and are excellent in preserving the shape of the shoe.

The value of frequent cleaning and pressing cannot be overestimated. Dirt is one of the greatest enemies to the wearing qualities of materials. Some men leave a standing order with the cleaner to pick up a suit or overcoat a week at the same time that he returns one. In this way, one's wardrobe is kept constantly in condition. A bottle of cleaning fluid kept on the bathroom shelf is a necessity. A spot of grease or simple stain should never be allowed to stand overnight.

Man and the Flowers.

The fragrance of plants is not for man's pleasure; it is a means of attracting insects to fertilize them. The object of many present-day florists is to improve a flower in its coloring, size and substance—in short to "paint the lily." They cannot improve the fragrance, which is perhaps the reason they seem to care so little for its appearance under their handling.—Exchange.

Wheat Crop of 1925 Shows Lowest Average Since 1904

THE 1925 wheat market has been one of many surprises for the growers of both winter and spring wheat, states the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Owing to unfavorable weather conditions last winter, which caused a large abandonment of winter wheat acreage due to the winter killing of nearly ten million acres, or 22 1/2 per cent of the area sown in wheat, the total crop production in 1925 reached only 669,365,000 bushels as compared to 862,627,000 bushels the year before. With the exception of 1917, this is the heaviest abandonment of wheat area on record. The final harvest averaged only 12.8 bushels per acre, which is the lowest average since 1904. Spring wheat, which looked very promising at first, also lost heavily through injury from rust. The yield per acre was cut down to 12.9 bushels, which is 3.3 bushels below the 1924 average.

The carry-over of wheat from 1924 was moderate. From 635,000,000 to 650,000,000 bushels are required for domestic consumption. Exports up to the end of December were nearly 60,000,000 bushels, and the remaining exportable surplus is small. Both winter and spring combined production totaled 193,262,000 bushels less than in 1924, making it the smallest wheat crop since 1917 in terms of production, and in proportion to population, the smallest wheat crop since 1890.

Because of a belief in a world shortage, wheat prices early in 1925 reached a high level, going up to $1.98. When it became evident that the apparent world shortage had been exaggerated, the market declined rapidly and went as low as $1.46 in April.

Most Difficult Things in Life

A Danish paper recently asked the readers to state what is the hardest thing in the world to do. It received many more replies than it had anticipated, some of which are as follows: To be a toe dancer if you weigh 200 pounds, to get back borrowed books, to trim one's nails while wearing boxing gloves. Some of the readers took the question seriously and answered it seriously. One replied that to live without telling a lie was the most difficult of all.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

IS COFFEE HARMFUL?

COFFEE is the morning drink of the great majority of American families. It is probably the noon and evening drink as well in most households. As all the coffee used in this country is imported, it is an easy matter to determine whether its use is increasing or not. On this question there is no doubt. Coffee drinking in the United States is steadily increasing.

While enormous quantities of tea are also used, tea has never been as popular in this country as coffee, nor as generally used here as it is in England.

Why do you not want a cup of hot coffee with your breakfast? For two reasons. The first is that most people like a hot drink with their meals. The second is that most coffee drinkers get a marked effect from the caffeine, which is the essential alkaloid in coffee. This drug stimulates the heart and raises the blood pressure. It puts a kick in you and sends you off to your day's work, ready to meet its trials and responsibilities.

Perhaps you are one of those who say, "Coffee doesn't affect me at all. I can drink it or let it alone and never know the difference." All right. But just leave off your usual cup of coffee tomorrow morning at breakfast. About nine or ten o'clock in the morning you will suddenly realize that you have a dull headache. You feel languid and stupid. Your mind isn't working as clearly as usual. Your brain is trying to work without its usual stimulant.

In a word, coffee and tea are drug habits. Just as are alcohol, tobacco, morphine and cocaine. Once accustom the body to a regular dose of any of these drugs and the body demands it.

Are these habit-forming drugs harmful? There has been much discussion on this subject, much of it bitter and prejudiced. The attitude of most of us is that our drug habit is harmless but our neighbor's drug habit is bad. I know an excellent lady who is violently opposed to tobacco and makes many public talks on this subject. She innocently told me one day that she never could make a strong convincing talk against the "filthy weed" unless she has a "good strong cup of tea" just before she went on the platform. And she wondered why I laughed.

Alcohol in any form, in large amounts and over a long period of time, undoubtedly injures the body. It produces distinct changes in the stomach, kidneys, liver, blood vessels and brain. Opium and cocaine leave no marks on the body but have a distinctly bad effect on the mind of the habitue. Tobacco, in spite of all statements to the contrary, has never proven to have any permanent effect on the body cells. Coffee and tea are the mildest and least harmful of these drugs but even these should be used in moderation and cut down or given up entirely, if their use is injurious.

OPEN THE WINDOWS

ONE of the favorite children's books of a generation ago was the "William Henry Letters," supposed to be the letters a boy wrote home to his parents from school. William Henry was distinguished for his common sense. He wrote his mother that the principal of his school told him that he must go to dancing school. William Henry asked him what good that would do him. The principal told him among other things that he'd learn from the dancing teacher how to enter a room. William Henry wrote, "I told him I didn't have to learn to enter a room. I said, 'Just walk in.'"

For many years builders, architects, physicians and others have been trying to invent and operate some machinery by which houses, workshops, factories, offices, assembly halls and schoolrooms could be kept supplied with fresh air. Finally, our best authorities have decided that the best, cheapest and surest way for fresh air to get into a building is the way William Henry planned to enter a room—"Just walk in." Open a window and let the air in. That's all there is to it.

At the annual meeting held in St. Louis in October the American Public Health association, our highest authority on public health, adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, hundreds of thousands of dollars are wasted every year in the installation and operation of systems of school ventilation which are not only not beneficial but are positively harmful to the health of school children, and

"Whereas, the use of ozone and other chemicals for treating school-room air has little or no practical value, be it

"Resolved, that the system of ventilating schoolrooms by fresh, untreated outdoor air admitted by the windows with gravity ducts for removing impure air from near the ceiling is the most satisfactory method of ventilation, and be it further

"Resolved, that we recommend that state laws and city regulations interfering with such scientific and economical methods of ventilation should be repealed in the interest of public health."

All of which means, if you want fresh air, open a window. It's the cheapest and best as well as the oldest method known.

Lincoln at Gettysburg

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war testing whether that nation or any nation so conceived and so dedicated can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow—this ground. The brave men living and dead who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.

Abraham Lincoln

This man whose homely face you look upon,
Was one of Nature's masterful, great men;

Born with strong arms, that unfought battles won,
Direct of speech, and cunning with the pen.

Chosen for large designs, he had the art
Of winning with his humor, and he went Straight to his mark, which was the human heart;

Wise, too, for what he could not break he bent.

Upon his back a more than Atlas load,
The burden of the Commonwealth, was laid;

He stooped, and rose up to it, though
Shot suddenly downward, not a whit dismayed.

Held, warriors, councillors, kings!
All now give place

To this dead Benefactor of the race!
—Richard Henry Stoddard.

Lincoln's Faith in American Principles

Never Lost Sight of Truth in Declaration of Independence.

Lincoln invoked the Declaration of Independence in his efforts to check the spread of slavery, but just as those who framed it uttered a maxim intended for all time, when merely seeking separation from Britain, so Lincoln reiterated an eternal and universal truth, and believed in it as such, Judge Charles C. Simons writes, in the Detroit News.

"I had thought the Declaration contemplated the progressive improvement in the condition of all men everywhere," he said. And he knew that it would outlive the death of slavery, just as the framers intended it should outlive their successful separation from Britain.

He closed his Springfield speech with this stirring appeal, after reading the Declaration with the Douglas interpolation: "Are you willing that the Declaration should thus be frittered away?—thus left no more, at most, than an interesting memento of the dead past?—thus shorn of its vitality and practical value, and left without the germ or even the suggestion of the individual rights of man in it?"

Three years later, on Washington's birthday, Lincoln, President-elect, stood in Independence hall, Philadelphia, on his way to the inauguration at Washington. Doesn't it, somehow, stir the blood and fire the imagination to think of Lincoln on the spot where the immortal Declaration was given to the world? "I have often inquired of myself," he said there, "what great principle or idea it was that kept this Confederacy so long together. It was not the mere matter of separation of the colonies from the motherland, but that sentiment in the Declaration of Independence which gave liberty not alone to the people of this country, but hope to all the world, for all future time."

Faith Again Voiced.

Speaking to the soldiers of an Ohio regiment toward the close of the war, Lincoln again voiced his faith in the American principle. "It is in order that each of you may have, through this free government which we have enjoyed, an open field and a fair chance for your industry, enterprise and intelligence, that you may all have equal privileges in the race of life, with all its desirable human aspirations. It is for this the struggle should be maintained, that we may not lose our birthright."

The world is full of strange contrasts and anomalies. It was a curious thing that the gentle, kindly, humane Lincoln should be called on to lead the nation in the greatest fratricidal war of history. It is a curious thing that today when passion, and prejudice and hate seem to rule humanity, there should be a world-wide revival of interest in Lincoln.

But there is hope in it. It may yet be that human nature will vibrate to the music of that passage which closes the first inaugural, "We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

Difficult to Recognize.

It is only when we understand the true character of our government, and why it was so organized and so established that we are able to recognize those projects which, in themselves seemingly wise, may when fairly considered be seen to destroy the harmony and threaten the integrity of the whole fabric. We sometimes fail to recognize in those things which seem to promise enlargement of liberty, things which in reality must result in curtailment of liberty. I have myself on occasion failed to recognize them, and so perhaps you may.

Not wholly has the original scheme of limitations, checks and balances been preserved. The electoral college in its original form was early swept aside. Perhaps wisely so. The differentiation between the two houses of congress by which they were to act as checks, one upon the other, has been partially obliterated by the popular election of senators. The representative organization of political parties, which while not created by the Constitution, owes its development to the representative system of the Constitution, has been almost wholly destroyed. I am not suggesting that any one of these basic changes is in itself vital, and besides they involve political controversies into which I do not care to enter—but I am indicating a tendency in respect to the checks and limitations of the Constitution which it is well for us to consider, especially when self interest and patriotism so happily combine to urge on us the perpetuation of the Constitution in the spirit of its founders.

Lesson for February 14

JESUS, THE GOOD SHEPHERD

LESSON TEXT—John 10:1-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the good shepherd, the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."—John 10:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Good Shepherd and His Sheep.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Good

Shepherd.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-

IC—What the Good Shepherd Does for His Sheep.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-

IC—Many Sheep, but One Shepherd.

The relationship of the Messiah to His own is set forth in the Old Testament under the figure of the shepherd and his sheep. (Ps. 23, Ez. 34).

1. The Good Shepherd (vv. 1-18).

1. He Is the True Shepherd (vv.

1-6).

He came by the divinely appointed way. The power exercised by the Pharisees in casting out this man was not obtained by lawful means. It was stolen by them and exercised in the bold spirit of robbers. John the Baptist, and others of the prophets, had performed the function of the porter and opened the door to the Shepherd (v. 23). Despite the deceit, audacity, theft and robbery of these

Pharisees, those who were Christ's sheep were declared to be forming a new flock and following Him as the true Shepherd (v. 4). The reason the man suffered excommunication for

Jesus' sake was that he recognized

Him as the true Shepherd and the Pharisees as strangers.

2. He Is the Door of the Sheep

(vv. 7-10).

The way to fellowship to God is through Christ. He is the only door

(Acts 4:12). There is absolutely no way to get into the fold of the redeemed but by Him. All who attempt it are thieves and robbers (v. 8).

Those who become members of the flock through Him enjoy marvelous gifts (v. 9, 10).

(1) Salvation—"Shall be saved."

Not only saved now but saved eternally

(vv. 27, 28).

(2) Liberty—"Shall go in and out"

(v. 9).

Only those who accept salvation in Christ know what freedom is.

(3) Contentment—"Shall go in and out and find pasture" (v. 9).

The one who really enters the fold

by Christ, the door, receives that which is all-satisfying to the soul.

3. He Is the Good Shepherd (vv.

11-18).

He is so devoted to His sheep that

He willingly lays down His life for them. The hireling abandons his sheep in time of danger. The Good Shepherd has perfect knowledge of

His sheep and they know Him (vv.

14, 15). He enjoys such personal intimacy with His sheep that He knows them by name and goes before them to lead the way and defend them from every danger. This He will do even unto death. On Calvary this was historically fulfilled. It was Christ's love for such sheep as this poor blind man that caused Him to give up His life in order to find for them the abundant life (v. 10). This sympathy is worldwide—"other sheep I have which are not of this fold." This suggests that the Gentiles have a place in His fold.

All who believe in Christ form one flock. In order to save His sheep He voluntarily laid down His life (vv.
17, 18).

11. The Sheep (vv. 19-30).

1. Unbelievers Are Not His Sheep

(vv. 19-26).

Christ's assertion that He was the good shepherd caused a division among the people. Some accused Him of being mad, others that He had a devil. To their request that He would tell them plainly if He were the Christ, He referred them to the testimony of His works, declaring that the secret of their inability to recognize Him was their unbelief.

2. They Recognize His Voice (v. 4).

There are many voices in the world, the voice of the hireling, the voice of the thief and the voice of the stranger,

but none of these will the sheep hear.

The voice of the true Shepherd is recognized by His sheep even amidst the babel of voices in the world today.

3. His Sheep Follow Him (vv. 3, 27).

This is the proof that they are His.

The one who does not hear, heed, and obey the Lord's voice is clearly not

His sheep. His sheep have unquestioned faith in His ability to lead them.

4. His Sheep Are Eternally Se cure (vv. 27, 28).

The sheep are entirely dependent upon the Shepherd. It is the Shepherd's business to look after and care for the sheep. This He does for He knows them by name and is acquainted with their weaknesses and trials.

The Real Blessing

The real blessing, mercy, satisfaction, is not in the having or the lack of merely outward things, but in the consciousness that the true source of life and happiness is deeper than all these.—John W. Chadwick.

Eyes to See

As a face is made beautiful by the soul's shining through it, so the world is beautiful by the shining through it of a loving God. Happy the man who has eyes to see the shining.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Conquer Constipation with Yeast Foam!

For constipation try this: drop a cake of Yeast Foam in a glass of water; let stand for five minutes; stir with spoon; let settle and drink the milky water, including the white precipitate.

Do this regularly and your constipation—no matter of how long standing—will be a thing of the past! Yeast Foam is equally effective for indigestion, boils, pimples, lack of weight and strength.

Or, if you prefer, eat the yeast with a cracker or a piece of butter.

Chains for French Women

In Paris a curious caprice of feminine fashion is illustrated in the jewelers' windows. The long pearl necklace, formerly much favored by smart women, has developed into a huge chain which, in everything but weight, resembles the sort of thing worn by slaves in ancient times. Bracelets have assumed an equally massive appearance. The clasps of these strange ornaments are knobs of ornamental stone roughly carved in quaint figures and looking as if they might have been dug from some long-forgotten haunt of prehistoric man.

There is more volume and greater mass in the mountain of Mauna Loa on the island of Hawaii than there is in Mt. Everest in Asia.

OAK LAWN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH NOTES
Last Wednesday evening the Brotherhood entertained their wives and friends. Prof. Clifford R. Shaw of the Y.M.C.A. College and the University of Chicago gave a very informing talk on his sociological research work. Prof. Shaw was formerly Probation Officer in the Juvenile Court. His Clinic and work for the adjustment of delinquent boys and girls is a most fascinating story. Parents and school teachers learned a valuable experience by this sociological study.

Prof. Walder and Prof. Arthur Holt are scheduled to appear at the next two meetings in March and April.

St. Gerald's Church held their last Bunco party before Lent, in the basement of the church, Wednesday evening, Feb. 10. Prizes were awarded and refreshments served and a fine time was enjoyed.

But they have promised us, that they would surely be with us on Monday evening, March 1st and have far better Entertainers than they could have had on February 15.

DANCES QUADRILLE ON 70th ANNIVERSARY

At the celebration Saturday night the most remarkable feature perhaps was an old fashioned quadrille in which four generations took part. Mrs. Lynk, the bride of 70 years ago, led the quadrille.

Thirty relatives including children, grand children and great grand children, gathered in the old homestead where the old couple have lived ever since they were married, to help celebrate the anniversary.

While the revered ancestor himself was unable to join in the festivities on account of failing health, Mrs. Lynk was as gay and as lively as the gayest there, possessing all her faculties.
